Ifoam Small Holder Group Certification Standards must allow for local equivalence and certification systems must be innovative and cost efficient enough to address smallholders' situation worldwide, particularly in developing countries. In this submission we give our opinion about group certification for smallholders in developing countries. Smallholder Group Certification for Organic ... - IFOAM Group certification is an approach that facilitates access of smallholders to organic certification and hence to organic markets and their associated benefits. IFOAM works extensively on the topic of group certification and the associated concept of Internal Control System (ICS). Internal Control Systems (ICS) for Group Certification | IFOAM In 2004, IFOAM - Organics International published the training kit on ICS for smallholder group certification. These materials are still a key resource today for anybody involved with the group certification topic and can be downloaded from this website. The training kit consists of materials for two target groups: Smallholder Group Certification - Training Manuals | IFOAM • A smallholder group is considered as single operator in the certification process (one contract, one overall report, one certificate for the group). • In principle, every smallholder group should be certified on the basis of a fully functioning ICS. If the ICS is not (yet) functioning well, the ICS needs to be improved. SMALLHOLDER
