Professor Dr. Lee Lyman examines an Indian artifact. He estimated the age of the elk antler in front of him at 7,000 to 8,000 years. I nearly walked past it, because only one eroded tine poked a few inches above the level surface of the sandbar. At first, I thought it was a stick of wood. Sandbar Hunting - Discovery, Ancestors, Archaeology ... Although the archaeology of Elk Ridge remains sparsely published and all-but-unknown to the scientific community, half a century of research on Cedar Mesa and its adjacent washes presents a considerable baseline for comparative analysis between the two. And this will continue to be true—so long as there is any archaeology left to compare. A Memorable Success in Preservation Archaeology on Elk
